EAT ENGLISH REMEDY.

It is true that Ireland, faithful to her traditions and loathing tyranny as intensely as she loves liberty, must necessarily supply these heroes.

Englishman as they were to the heroic Hastings, when he says:

"In the course of all this proceeding you will not fail to observe that he is ever correct, but he is cruel; he never divines with comfort but when he is sure to create a famine. He never robs from the loose superfluity of standing greatness; he devours the fallen, the indignant, the necessitous. His extortion is not like the generous rapacity of the PRINCELY EAGLE, which snatches away the living, struggling prey; he is a vulture who feeds upon the prostrate, the dying and the dead. As his cruelty is more shocking than his corruption, so his hypocrisy has something more frightful than his cruelty.

And now comes the pith of my address this evening. Irishmen! you who love your country, you who love her patriots—you who admire the Irish martyr, and who loathe the Irish spy—you, expatriated fellow-countrymen, who, like me, have been driven from the home of our fathers—who have left Ireland with a vengeance—I ask you, will the latest hero in the drama of Irish liberty, walk to the scaffold, without an effort on your part to save his precious life—I refer to

THE INDOMITABLE O'DONNELL

There is no use in mincing matters. I have heretofore been plain spoken, and now I declare here to-night that no act is recorded in the checked pages of Irish history more praiseworthy than the killing of the dog Carey, in the antipodes. His lawless career deserved a more humiliating treatment than that received at the clean hands of O'Donnell, but when we contemplate the surroundings; when we see this creature of damnation silently stealing from the gaze of his fellow man; when we behold him skulking behind English prison bars, as affording the only refuge to be found in the British dominions; when we see him go abroad the ship, which is to carry him from the scenes of his disgrace and his perfidy; when we view him aboard that ship and, certain that he has eluded the vigilance and the vengeance of the men whom he had so basely betrayed, when we contemplate all this, and find that in the very scene of his hopes, in the moment of his fancied security, he meets the avenger, I say God bless the hand of the brave O'Donnell, and cursed be the Irish race if it make no effort to save the man who has purged Irish society of informers forever. Too often have we been led by designing villains whose base purpose has been to fatten on our credulity. We have been wont to make leaders and heroes of accountants, whose sole object has been to learn our secrets and then

TO BETRAY US.

If such vermin are made aware that any branch they enter has an O'Donnell whose vengeance is as certain as their crime is heinous, they will either never enter our societies or their designs for evil will be impotent and harmless. Let us then take up subscriptions to defend O'Donnell, let us make the lion grand as well as historic in the name. See to it that he is properly honored.

THE OLD LAND LEAGUE.

although comparatively successful, the soldiering and different was manifested. Are the same men, for all time, expected to do all the work, and the great majority to remain passive lookers-on? For my own part, while I will not dare to say what I have done, I will say that while I live I will not cease to contribute my mite towards the regeneration of my native land. Nor shall I hesitate to affiliate with any society which has an honest, earnest desire to work for Ireland. My opinions may differ in minor details from those of the majority, but I shall be unworthy of the name of Irishman, if I do not allow the majority to lead; and thus hold my individual convictions in abeyance, without any sacrifice of principle.

PEACEABLE ASSASSINATION.

Four years ago the landlord would not recognize tenants unless the latter, hat in hand, addressed him with a cringing, fawning demeanor. To-day he is afraid to approach the tenant lest he may meet the doom of a Leitrim or a Carey. Happy transformation! But that is not all. The direct result of the land act, the product of the Land League, is a net saving to Irish farmers of $50,000,000 annually. But that is not all. The outer world knew naught of Ireland's internal misery, nor the curse upon her, of England's iron hand of despotism. The people of the Land League went forth, and soon the finger of scorn of the civilized world was pointed at England. We that great lever, that omnipotent factor in the world's politics—public opinion—denounced England. All the way from the Valde Hills to the Sierra Madra. But that is not all. The most wonderful reformation of all is that the most advanced thinkers of England itself are forced to the conviction that

IRELAND MUST HAVE HOME RULE.

Irishmen, did you ever dream that England's political economists would openly concede the proposition that Ireland ought to have the power of managing her own affairs? And all this has been accomplished by the Land League, backed by the co-operation of other Irish societies! Forster tried to put the Land League in prison, but he could not imprison an idea. At one time he had five hundred Land Leaguers in jail, and a New York paper of the time said, "It seems he is determined to crush the Land League." Whereat The Toledo Blade retorts as follows:

Crush the League! Curse the League. Forster, he thundered. Here I hold it in my hand; he never divines with comfort but when he is sure to create a famine. He never robs from the loose superfluity of standing greatness; he devours the fallen, the indignant, the necessitous. His extortion is not like the generous rapacity of the PRINCELY EAGLE, which snatches away the living, struggling prey; he is a vulture who feeds upon the prostrate, the dying and the dead. As his cruelty is more shocking than his corruption, so his hypocrisy has something more frightful than his cruelty.

THE FIVE HUNDRED

are still in the breach. Parnell and his followers are still undaunted. Nay, more; they are becoming stronger and more aggressive every day. The beginning and the end is approaching. The handwriting is upon the wall. Neither the powers of England nor the powers of Hell can keep Ireland subjugated. Ireland is educated. If peaceable agitation will not do, then by the God of battles, dynamite and the torch, the dagger and the bullet must take its place. The time has come that Ireland shall assert her prerogatives. Too long has she lain chained to the rock, a prey to the vultures. She has arisen from her lethargy; she must vindicate her cause, uphold her ancient honor, demonstrate that she is a nation of heroes, and hurl the hated enemy of her race from her shores forever, even though in the attempt she may be called an assassin or a murderer!

IRELAND'S HISTORY.

and see what it was that kept love of country alive in the breasts of an outraged nation. Was not the object of the penal code the same, although more fierce, as that of Gladstone in his emigration scheme? O, who will read that code, dressed in all its native barbarity and fiendishness, and not hate England with an undying, indestructible hate? But while England, during her Queen Victoria's reign, was executing her penal code, in all its literal accuracy, were Irish societies plotting the overthrow of the devilish engine of destruction, and sometimes these brave fellows broke forth like the hurricane of the forest, and for a time swept all obstructions before them. Of course superior brute force and demonic zeal finally conquered. But they sold their lives dearly, and bequeathed to their offspring their hatred and their patriotism. The memorable 1798 is a good example, when glorious Wicklow and Wexford rose in their anger. Was their defeat an argument against future attempts? Say rather, do we of to-day pride ourselves more upon any epoch of history? Then Sassanich felt the power of the people and the Sogarth Aroon. Hal it is no wonder that England dreads a combination of

THE PRIESTS AND PEOPLE.

Who then fears to speak of '98, Who blushes at the name, When towards mock the patriot's fate, Who hangs his head with shame?

VORACIOUS TALES.

The Feats of Sword Swallowers, Fire Eaters and Stone Chewers.

From the London Telegraph. Not long ago Ramo Sano earned a subsistence by swallowing swords, and in getting his living came by his death. Indeed, things much more wonderful than that have been achieved, if we are to believe all we are told. In the year 1826, one, "M. Chabert," describing himself as "the continental Salamander," performed the following feats at White Conduit gardens, having partaken of a hearty meal of phosphorus washed down with a copious draught of oxalic acid in a solution of arsenic, he drank of a jorum of boiling oil, and with his naked hand helped him to a serving of molten lead by way of desert. On another occasion the "Monsieur" walked—like Shadrack, Meshach, and Abednego, in the Book of Daniel—into a fiery furnace, stood in some considerable space of time, and came out whole and unburnt. He represented the furnace as hotter than it really was, though as a matter of fact he took in with him a raw beefsteak and brought it out broiled to a turn. Strutt, from his own personal knowledge, gives the case of a professed fire eater, named Powell, whom he had seen perform during the latter part of the eighteenth century, and who was well known in different parts of the kingdom at that period. Powell used to eat burning coals from the fire. He could place a bunch of lighted matches in his mouth and blow the smoke of the burning sulphur through his nostrils; and he thought nothing of carrying a red-hot iron held between his teeth around the room. When Powell wanted to broil a steak he took a piece of lighted charcoal and laid it on top of his tongue, on top of which he placed the steak. He would then request one of the bystanders to blow up the fire with his breath until the meat was cooked. This gentleman's soup consisted of pitch, brimstone, and molten lead, which he liked best in a state of liquefaction, blazing furiously. Strutt has another case—that of a cotemporary artist, who says the voracious chronicler, "amused the public and filled his pocket by eating stones which, it is said, he actually cracked between his teeth and afterwards swallowed. Then there is the Tinker of Twitman, in the old comedy of 'The Two Madams of Moreclack,' who could 'lick out burning firebrands with his tongue, and drink two pence from the bottom of a full bottle of ale." Our old friend of country fairs and race courses, the Anglo-North American Indian, with his trick of making a meal of lighted tow, is not, by comparison, the wonderful artist he would have us think to be. In the East, especially, are many persons who follow the profession of eating powdered glass and swallowing swords, and who certainly would not make two bites at a poker.

IREISHMEN OF OMAHA.

see to it that every man of your race is in active sympathy with the League. Use every effort to uphold Parnell. The fight is with the Irish in America. Our brothers at home look wistfully across the western waters for support and encouragement. I beg of you in the name of the martyred dead, in the name of Ireland's beauty and chivalry, in the name of her glorious history and the struggles of the past, in the name of God do everything in your power to cement fellowship, to promote patriotism, to solidify the disintegrated, and to march to the assistance of your motherland in this her final struggle in one grand army of liberation, whose war cry will open the portals of liberty and make Ireland

GOWNS FOR SCHOOL GIRLS.

Healthful and Helpful Costumes More in Favor Now Than Ever Before.

New York Letter in Hartford Times.

One of the most gratifying signs of progress in the general awakening in regard to school dress. It has heretofore been considered enough to discourage a lavish display of jewelry, but a girl could be thinly clad in cold weather; she could change from thick wool to thin silk; she could encase her arms in skin-tight sleeves and pull her dresses together within a quarter of an inch of her life—and no one thought of protesting against her folly. But gymnastics in school have accomplished something; they have established the fact that with ordinary dress the girl cannot raise or use her arms, and it has at last dawned upon teachers and intelligent mothers that she ought to be able to use them elsewhere than in the gymnasium. The principal of one of the most fashionable schools in New York will not permit her pupils to wear a dress of any material save wool or cotton—the former in winter, the latter in mild weather, if they choose. A girl wearing a velvet until one day was sent home with a message that her dress must be changed to one adapted for school wear. The mother of the girl returned with a reply that it was her last year's suit which must be utilized or it would be outgrown. The teacher was inflexible. She said the school room was no place for cut off finery; that the moral effect was bad and the final result was a salutary one.

A school in Massachusetts recommends to its 200 girl students a sensible school dress of which the following are some of the features: First, it is to consist of single layers of clothing, so that warmth shall be equally distributed over the body. Secondly, it should be sufficiently loose not to impose restrictions upon the free and active use of the muscles. Third, the material should be soft, unweaving in color and undistinguishable in pattern. Fourth, the design should suggest rather than outline the figure, unless the material is elastic, and should be divided into few parts in order to be free from distraction. Fifth, it should avoid whatever is unnecessary, or that takes time and strength that could be better put into work or play.

The combination undergarment of knitted wool or cotton, or both, the skirt of pleated wool attached to a lining waist and cut with a spring over the hip, and a polonaise or a woolen "jersey" supplies all the requirements for such a dress. If the polonaise is employed, the lining waist may be extended so as to require only a deep pleated flounce of the wool to bring it to the length of the walking skirt, thus rendering it lighter and cheaper.

The polonaise should be pleated at the back, a part of the fullness taken out of the waist and cut with a whole sack front which could be belted in. The sleeves should be cut very high and somewhat full at the top, so as to surround the arm at the socket and allow free movement. All dress skirts made of wool should be attached to a lining waist, as this equalizes both warmth and weight.

Cure of Pneumonia.

Mr. D. H. Barnaby, of Owego, N. Y., says that his daughter was taken with a violent cold which terminated in pneumonia, and all the best physicians were called, but she could not live but a few hours at most. She was in this condition when a friend recommended "Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs" and advised her to try it. She accepted it as a last resort, and was surprised to find that it produced a marked change for the better, and by persevering in its use a permanent cure was effected.

DR. FISHBLATT

Has discovered the greatest cure in the world for weakness of the back and limbs, involuntary discharge, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, timidity, trembling, dizziness, sight or ringing in the ears, headache, neuralgia, sciatica, rheumatism, indigestion, flatulency, stomach or bowels—those terrible habits arising from indolent habits, the most serious and secret practices more fatal to the victims than the songs of Sirens to the mariners of Ulysses, blighting their most radiant hopes or anticipations, rendering marriage impossible. Those that are suffering from the evil practices which destroy their mental and physical system, causing

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

The symptoms of which are a dull, distressed mind, which unfit for performing their business and social duties, makes happy marriage impossible, distresses the action of the heart, causing flushes of heat, depression of spirits, evil forebodings, cowardice, fears, dreams, restlessness, forgetfulness, unnatural discharges, pain in the back and hips, short breathing, melancholy, tire easily of company and have preference to be alone, feeling as tired in the morning as when retiring, venereal weakness, full moon-brood, white hairs deposit in the urine, nervousness, confusion of thought, trembling, watery and weak eyes, dyspepsia, constipation, paleness, pain and weakness in the limbs, etc., should consult me immediately and be restored to perfect health.

YOUNG MEN

Who have become victims of solitary vice, that dreadful and destructive habit which annually sweeps to an untimely grave thousands of young men of exalted talent and brilliant intellect who might otherwise entrance listening senators with the thunders of their eloquence or wake to ecstasy the living lyre, may call with confidence.

MARRIAGE.

Married persons or young men contemplating marriage being aware of physical weakness, loss of procreative power, impotency, or any other disqualification, should be relieved. He who places himself under the care of Dr. Fishblatt may rely upon his skill as a physician.

ORGANIC WEAKNESS

Immediately cured and full vigor restored. This distressing affliction—which renders life a burden and marriage impossible, is the penalty paid by the victim for improper indulgence. Young people are apt to consult physicians from not being aware of the dreadful consequences that may ensue. None who understand this subject will deny that procreation is lost sooner by those falling into improper habits than by procreation itself. Healthy procreation is the pleasure of healthy offspring, the most serious and destructive symptoms of both body and mind arise. The system becomes deranged, the physical and mental faculties languish. Loss of procreative power, nervous irritability, dyspepsia, palpitation of the heart, indigestion, constant local debility, wasting of the frame, emaciation, and death.

A CURE WARRANTED.

Persons ruined in health by unlearned pretenders who keep them trifling month after month taking poisonous and injurious compounds, should apply immediately.

DR. FISHBLATT, graduate of one of the most eminent colleges of the United States, has effected some of the most astonishing cures that ever were known; most troubled with ringing in the ears and head, when asleep, great nervousness, being alarmed at certain sounds, with frequent blushing, attended sometimes with derangement of the mind were cured immediately.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE. Dr. F. addresses all those who have injured themselves by improper indulgence and solitary habits which ruin both body and mind, uniting them for business, study, society or marriage. These are some of the melancholy effects produced by the early habits of youth, viz: Weakness of the back and limbs, pain in the head and dizziness of sight, loss of muscular power, palpitation of the heart, dyspepsia, nervous irritability, derangement of the digestive functions, debility, consumption.
